Martin Kayser combines an active practice as a attorney with an academic career as a post-doctoral research fellow at the University of Zurich. He advises both government entities and private businesses on administrative procedure and judicial review of administrative action. As a consultant lawyer for law firms he has worked on a variety of education and health service matters and also has substantial experience in general constitutional and administrative law. Martin also works as an of counsel at the law firm Poledna Boss Kurer (PBK) in Zurich.

Before starting as an independent consultant, Martin worked at the Zurich Higher Administrative Court and as a visiting research scholar in London and Heidelberg. He holds a Master of Laws degree from University College London (LLM in Public Law 2006) and a doctorate from the University of Zurich (2000). He lectures and publishes extensively.
